

Mary Yelenick's sworn declaration is filled with many errors. For example, she greatly overstates her contribution for originating relationships.

Ms. Yelenick received shared billing and/or responsible credit for client relationships that other partners and attorneys, in near entirety, won and developed without her involvement. Despite having been with the Firm for many years, Ms. Yelenick completely distorts the facts surrounding how client relationships are shared and transitioned. She reaped the rewards of the Firm's process in the years when she was among the more highly compensated partners in the Firm, and in other years, her compensation reflected less significant contributions. But in every year, her compensation always reflected her contributions, and never her gender.

The cause of gender equality is not advanced by erroneous, self-serving, and baseless allegations used to support a lawsuit that seeks unjust economic reward for decisions made on the merits, having nothing to do with gender.
